INTRODUCTION

It is with great pleasure that we present the Prince Alfred College Strategic Plan for 2021-24.

This follows on from the 2016-2020 Strategic Plan, which we believe has served the College well. During that period, a number of key objectives were achieved, including record enrolment, improved academic performance across the board, and Prince Alfred College taking a prominent role in promoting boys' education and advocating for boys.

We are very grateful to Kathy Carruthers and Jane Jeffreys for their work in facilitating the process of developing our new plan. Like many other activities in 2020, this process was affected and delayed by the COVID pandemic. Given the challenges encountered in undertaking this important community consultation section of the planning process, we are pleased to complete and launch this plan in the first half of 2021.

As we gained feedback from the various sections of the College community - parents, staff, students and Old Scholars – some clear directions emerged. Rather than dividing the plan into the College's operational divisions, we have taken a themed approach, with several areas of school activity appearing under more than one heading.

Respondents identified a number of outward-looking initiatives as key components in our new Strategic Plan. These include: community engagement and service; promoting diversity and inclusiveness; and sustainability in all its forms. All of these have found expression within our new plan, along with a desire to see the College taking a leadership role in these areas.

Building on the strong foundations of the current Plan, the College Council and Executive are now committed to ensuring the successful implementation of our new Strategic Plan, for the benefit of all sections of the College community. We look forward to working with our community in enabling this next exciting chapter of Prince Alfred College's history.
